ABOUT US

Shared Harvest is a social enterprise founded by three Black women doctors. Our mission is to spread compassion through wellness, service, and relief, providing white glove treatment to everyone, every time.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, we address the student debt crisis and other sociopolitical determinants of health. Our volunteer management solution is the first of its kind to transform the liability of student loan debt into an asset class for social change. We forged a diverse network of healthcare providers that directs resources to communities in real time.

We are dedicated to improving equity in health, higher education, financial and digital spheres. Shared Harvest is an ideal partner for any Corporate Social Responsibility programming, paving the way to a more equitable future.

MEET THE CHIEF MEDICAL OFFICER

Dr. NanaEfua B. Afoh-Manin is an emergency medicine doctor, public health practitioner, entrepreneur, and a champion for health equity.

After earning her Bachelor of Science at UCLA, she went on to obtain her medical degree at the University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry. She then completed her residency in Emergency Medicine at the University of Chicago Medical Center, where she served as Research Chief. At Columbia University's Mailman School of Public Health, she completed her fellowship and earned her Masters in Global Public Health and Disaster Medicine.

Dr. Nana has dedicated her career to raising awareness about the social determinants of health in refugee, urban, and disaster settings. When COVID-19 struck, disparities in equal access to healthcare across the United States became even more apparent. Dr. Nana worked tirelessly to found Shared Harvest | myCovidMD™ in an endeavor to provide equal access to coronavirus testing and much needed social services for the communities that would face the highest rates of mortality due to COVID-19.
